April 10, 2019

Dear Mr. Jones

This letter is in reference to Margie Warren and Delisa Patrick, whom you represent and for whom you have spoken to me.

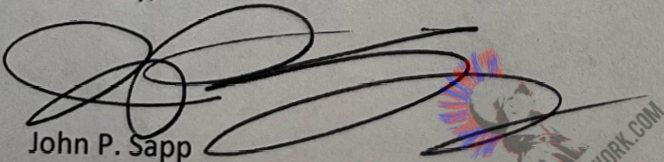

My wife received a phone call from the furniture store where a power lift assist recliner and end table were purchased for Margie Warren. Delisa Patrick recently called demanding a refund of the approximately $1,300 purchase price claiming the purchase was made fraudulently with Margie's debit card. This was an authorized purchase made by my wife, Stephanie Sapp, for sole benefit of Margie and with Margie's consent. Margie has possession of her chair and table, both of which she took with her to Delisa Patrick's home. To claim this is a fraudulent purchase is in itself fraud.

All transactions made during the time Margie Warren stayed as a guest in our home, whether in cash or with bank draft, were done with her knowledge and consent. Furthermore, Stephanie Sapp did so under a General Durable Power of Attorney granted by Margie Warren. Stephanie has receipts and/or a ledger recording each and every transaction made on Margie's behalf.

Also I am sending two pieces of Margie Warren's mail delivered to our home. Please forward to your client's current address. We respectfully request Margie submit a change of address to reflect her change in residence. We will not be forwarding to you any additional mail sent here after this notice.

Thank you for your attention in these matters.

Sincerely,

John P. Sapp

Dr. Robert Durgin

Dear Dr. Durgin,

Thank you for meeting with our family to discuss Margie Warren's health and care Wednesday, March 10th. As Stephanie and I walked with you after the meeting you made the statement that Delisa Patrick obviously loves her mother very much. I think you may have drawn the wrong conclusion.

Delisa Patrick, my sister-in-law, has a high need to dominate and control every situation and everyone around her. Initially she will use a pleasant demeanor and persuasion to accomplish this goal. If unsuccessful, she will use intimidation and bullying, finally escalating to threats of harm. My guess is that she has probably already threatened you with legal action. And I bet some of your nursing staff has been threatened with a statement like, "You better hope I don't run into you in the parking lot after shift or I will..." All this is standard behavior for Delisa and is quite disturbing.

Delisa's behavior is not limited to just you and your staff or a manifestation of the stresses associated with a critically ill Mother. In fact, Mom and Delisa's minor son, [REDACTED], are often the targets of this manipulative behavior. In fact, Delisa returned to Mom's room following our meeting with you and began yelling at Mom to declare she wanted Delisa to make decisions for her, not Beverly - Mom's legally designated POA. Delisa's demonstrative behavior is not love nor is it rooted in love.

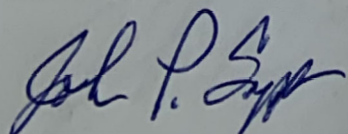

I also respectfully challenge the notion Mom's necrotizing fasciitis was caused by a long dormant cyst that ruptured. It seems more likely an untreated/mistreated sore, scrape or cut became infected due to poor hygiene and an unsanitary living environment. At the hospital, Delisa stated to the family that she and her daughter, [REDACTED], had lanced and packed a cyst on Mom's groin. I yield to your professional opinion, provided you knew of and dismissed these possibilities.

Furthermore, in a rare polite call to her sisters, Kim and Beverly, Delisa indicated that Mom was suffering from what she assessed to be an UTI. Additional phone conversations throughout the week preceding Mom's emergency hospitalization and surgeries indicated the infection was getting worse. Delisa's stated plan was to consult the home care nurse the following week. Kim and Bell advised her to take Mom to the doctor or call 911 and get her to the hospital. A couple days later Mom was brought into your ER with a life threatening condition.

Regardless of the origin of the infection, the amount of time that elapsed prior to seeking professional medical attention clearly shows negligence on the part of Mom's caregiver, Delisa. The severity of Mom's wounds attest to negligence and possibly even abuse. There is little evidence of love or compassion in the level of care that Delisa provided.

I would not burden you with this simply to set the record straight. Rather, I have well founded concerns that Mom may be in continued danger by Delisa's constant presence and her defiant, abusive behavior. While I do not believe Delisa will act upon threats she has likely made to your nursing staff, we cannot ignore threats of violence in these troubling times. I do not expect anyone to act upon my words alone but rather my words may assist you in piecing together a more complete understanding of Delisa Patrick and the threat she may pose to Mom and others.

Sincerely,

John Sapp

To Whom It May Concern,

The last time Delisa called 911 regarding another one of my grandchildren was because "the child quit breathing due to a heart murmur & she brought the child back by doing CPR." The ambulance took the child to the ER & the hospital determined the heart murmur had closed some time ago. A couple of days after they returned home from the hospital, DCS showed up. They stated they received an anonymous report that she was believed to have had Munchausen & was purposely causing the child to not be able to breathe & then performing CPR on the child. They told her due to allegations, if there wasn't anyone to stay with her & the children while her husband was at work, then they would have to remove the kids. The child was around 2 yrs old, I believe at the time. She called me & told me these details & I told her I would stay. I ended up there every night my son was at work for months. Miraculously, the child never had an incident like this again. I think if she had not called 911 so many times due to the child not breathing, she probably wouldn't have had DCS called. But, she always had an emergency with one of the kids every time her & my son was in an argument before he left for work (he worked nights) The children have only had "health problems" when no other adult was around to witness it other than her.

To Whom It May Concern,

In a previous statement, I said that Delisa uses the kids to try to get what she wants or for attention. She especially did this when her & my son was arguing.

When the same child (as in previous statement) was 5 weeks old, the child was taken by ambulance to the ER for "not breathing."

Delisa had stated that she had to get the child breathing again while the ambulance was on the way. The child was admitted for testing for a couple days.

My son was at work that night & went straight to the hospital. They needed something from the house & asked me if I would get it & bring it to them. When I went into the home, there was a suitcase open on the bed with clothes in it. Later, I confronted my son about it & he said they were arguing before he left for work & he had been packing to leave her. The child was diagnosed with the reflux.

She also did it to myself also. At any time, I didn't do what she wanted or agreed with or didn't give them money when they asked, I was cut off from seeing the kids. As of May 2024, it will be 9 yrs. since I have seen my 3 grandchildren.
